Modals

⇨ Must

> "Must" is a modal verb that is used to express strong obligation or necessity. It is always followed by the base form of a verb.

- "Must" can be used in different tenses, such as present, past, and future, to express obligation or necessity.

- To form negative sentences with "must," we use "must not" or "mustn't" followed by the base form of a verb.

- For example, "You mustn't be late for the meeting" or "I must not forget to buy groceries."

- We can use "must" to give advice, make suggestions, or express a strong recommendation.

- For example, "You must see that movie, it's amazing!" or "You must try this new restaurant, it's fantastic!"

- "Must" is commonly used in formal situations such as business meetings, interviews, or official correspondence.

- "Must" is often used with the auxiliary verb "have to" to express obligation or necessity.

- For example, "I have to finish my report today, I must submit it tomorrow."

- In some cases, "must" can be replaced with "need to" or "have to" without changing the meaning of the sentence. However, "must" often carries a stronger sense of obligation or necessity.
