

Intelligent

Most routers can automatically detect if a part of the network is not working or is slow. The routers will try to redirect information around the problem area so the impact of the network failure will be minimal. Routers are said to be "intelligent" because they can analyze a network to determine the best route for information to take.

