

Wide Area Networks

Routers are often used to connect local area networks to a wide area network. Routers can also be used to break up a wide area network into segments. This helps reduce the amount of information being transferred over the network and improves the efficiency of the wide area network.

