

Hubs

A hub provides a central location where all the cables on a network can meet together. Hubs are found on most modern networks. Traditionally, only star network structures used hubs. Using hubs to connect computers is now very common. Many types of network structures are now using hubs as the primary method of connecting computers.

- Signal Regeneration
- Fault Tolerance
- Ports
- Daisy Chaining
- Easy Reconfiguration