

The Desktop

The word 'Desktop' has been derived from real life desk top where a manager puts all the things required by her. For instance, on a desktop, there may be a pen-stand, note pad, calculator, file folder etc. lying, which are required by same purpose.

In BOSS Linux Operating System, the screen upon which icons, windows, etc. are displayed is known as desktop. The BOSS Linux Operating System desktop may contain a background, one or more active or inactive windows, a window panel, and icons. A background can be anything from a single-color screen to an elaborate artistic image. All windows and icons are superimposed on the background, whatever it may be.

BOSS Linux operating system, like its other counterparts, comes with two different desktops is the same but their appearance and utilities may differ slightly.

In order to work with both these desktops, both of these must be installed on your machines.
