

Ease of Access

Many networks make it easier for people to work with and manage their files by storing most information on a central computer. Users are then able to access their information from other computers on the network.

