Port

A port is used to connect the network interface card to the network. Most new network interface cards have one port that is designed to work with a specific type of network cable. Some network interface cards have two ports, which enables these cards to connect to a network using one of two different cable types. A network Menace card can only be used to connect lo one network at a time.