Fault Tolerance

Hubs are an important part of a network, so it is critical that they operate continuously. Many hubs have built-in features that prevent the hub from shutting down when a component in the hub fails. For example, a hub with two power supply fails.