

Accidents

Accidents are a common and frustrating way to lose data. A service technician performing maintenance or repairs on a computer may inadvertently erase the contents of a hard drive. Computer users may also mistakenly erase information they think is unimportant, only to discover later that the information was needed.

