

Lack of Training

Network users who are not properly trained how to access network data and use network equipment are likely to damage the data or equipment. Users who have not been trained recognize suspicious changes in their computer systems are also a threat to network data because they are unable to alert the system administrator to possible security breaches.

