

Electronic Eavesdropping

Sophisticated monitoring equipment can be used to record and decipher the electrical signals that are transmitted on network cables. If a network is used to transfer confidential information, the network administrator should ensure that steps are taken to prevent electronic eavesdropping, such as using fiber-optic cable. Fiber-optic cable does not emit electrical signals that can be monitored.

