

Network Operating Systems

Many network operating system manufacturers such as Novell, make products that can simplify the process of connecting a network to the internet. When planning a connection to the Internet, the network administrator or Internet service provider should determine if there are any products available that may help.

