

Cost

Compared to other network devices, modems provide a cost-effective way to communicate on a network. Since modems are inexpensive and use existing telephone lines, a modem is a practical option for companies who want to extend their network or allow employees to access the network while away from the office.

