Algorithms

Routers use mathematical formulas, called algorithms, to determine the most efficient route for information to take. Routers use many variables, such as distance and the speed of network segments, to determine which path should be used to transfer information.