

Work from Home

Many networks have dedicated computers that allow people to connect to the company's network using a modem and a computer outside the network. Users can then work with network information from home.

