

Protection of Information

Many networks use only a few computers to store all the files and information on the network. Companies can easily protect these computers from fire or theft by keeping them in a secure location.

