Servers

Servers are usually the busiest computers on a network. The network interface cards used by servers are often high performance devices that have been specifically designed to transfer large amounts of data.