Computer Failure

The main cause of lost information is computer failure. Most storage devices, such as hard drives, are mechanical devices, which can become worn out and prone to failure. A storage device is often the first component to malfunction in a computer. When a storage device fails, all the data stored on the device may be lost.