

Infection

Networks can become infected with viruses through files, such as files received on floppy disks, files downloaded from the internet or files received as e-mail attachments. These types of files should not be used on a computer connected to a network until an anti-virus program has scanned the files.

