

Training

When an existing network is connected to the Internet, many network users will need to be trained to work with the applications used to access Internet information. Applications such as e-mail programs, Web browsers and file transfer programs can be very complex and users should know how to use them properly.

