

Save Money

Connecting a network to the Internet can save a company money in areas of the business that are not directly related to the use of the network. For example, many companies reduce costs in areas such as long-distance telephone charges and research time by connecting their networks to the Internet.

