

Internet Technology

Intranets transfer information on a network using the same technology that is used to transfer information on the Internet. This allows intranets to exchange information quickly and easily over different types of networks, without having to consider the network operating systems used on each network.

