

Network Extension

Repeaters are used to extend the length of the cables that connect computer devices together on a network. Repeaters are especially useful in areas where long lengths of cable are required to connect computer devices together, such as a network in a large warehouse.

