

Signal Amplification and Regeneration

A repeater amplifies a signal it receives, so the signal can travel along a longer length of cable. Repeaters can also regenerate a signal by filtering out any interference or distortion before the signal is amplified and retransmitted.

