

Speed

A router must analyze the information passing through it to determine what action should be taken. If the router cannot process the information fast enough, the network will experience a slowdown. Most routers contain very fast processors to help prevent network slowdowns.

