Router Types

Most routers can automatically determine the best route for information. With older routers, called static routers, a network administrator had to manually configure the router to recognize each route information could take. Newer routers, called dynamic routers, automatically create and maintain a table of the available routes on the network.

Static Router   Dynamic Router