

Remote Access

Modems are commonly used to provide people with access to the company network while traveling. By using a modem to connect to the network, a user can exchange messages with colleagues and work with office files from almost anywhere in the world.

