Boating

Gently the river bore us

Beneath the morning sky,

Singing, singing, singing,

As we went floating by;

In our small boat we lay

Rocking, rocking, rocking

Under the willows grey.

When into bed that evening
I climbed it seemed a boat
Was rocking, rocking, rocking,
Rocking me to sleep
And I was still afloat.
I heard the grey willows weep
And whisper round my bed
The river singing, singing
Singing through my head.

James Reeves

Willows trees give out excess of water through their leaves by a process called transpiration. They give out maximum water, so are called weeping willows.
