

Introduction of Plants

The plant is a living organism that grows with the help of water. There are different varieties of plants on the planet earth. Many plants provide food, and some have medicinal uses. Some plants are a good source of water for the humans who consume them. The leaves of plants are usually green.

