

Physical Change

When a substance undergoes a physical change, its composition remains the same despite its molecule being rearranged. Physical change is a temporary change. We can get back the previous form of the substance either by removing the conditions causing that change or reconstructing the conditions in which the substance was. A physical change affects only physical properties i.e. shape, size etc.

