

Germination of Seeds

Germination is defined as the beginning of growth. The term is most commonly associated with plants, describing the process of a seed sprouting into a seedling.

- A. The term germination can also be applied to spores or buds.
- B. The change of seed into seedling is called germination.
- C. Air, water, soil and sunlight are needed for the germination.
- D. All conditions are necessary for the germination.
- E. It sprouts and tiny roots come out from soft seed coat.
- F. After this shoot also grows and produces stem and leaves.
- G. Root grows downwards under the ground and shoot grows upward.

